1. Mission. Air Combat Command (ACC) prepares assigned forces for air combat in a theater of operations. ACC organizes, trains, and equips forces for joint or combined operations in the roles of aerospace control, force application, force enhancement, and force support. This organization is a Major Command of the US Air Force.

2. Command. The ACC Commander will:

- 2.1. Respond to the Chief of Staff of the Air Force for administration.
- 2.2. Provide forces and exercise OPCON as the Air Force Component of the United States Atlantic Command (USACOM).
- 2.3. Provide forces and exercise OPCON as the Air Force Component of the United States Strategic Command (USSTRATCOM).
- 2.4. Provide Air Force forces to United States Element North American Air Defense Command (USELNORAD).
- 2.5. Exercise OPCON of Air Force C-130 forces assigned to United States Transportation Command (USTRANSCOM).

3. Responsibilities. ACC will:

- 3.1. Organize, train, and equip combat-ready forces.
- 3.2. Provide air forces for USSTRATCOM.
- 3.3. Support the Drug Enforcement Agency and U.S. Customs Agency in monitoring and intercepting illegal drug traffic entering the United States.
- 3.4. Test and acquire new or improved combat systems and equipment.
- 3.5. Through USACOM, provide combat-ready forces, support, and equipment to unified commands when directed by JCS.

3.6. Provide air defense forces to USELNORAD.

3.7. Provide C-130s and air mobility mission support forces to USTRANSCOM.

3.8. Serve as gaining MAJCOM for assigned Air Force Reserve and Air National Guard forces. Mobilize or recall these forces to active duty for follow-on assignment to combatant commands as authorized by HAF.
